THREE CARS SUFFER IN CHURCH STREET CRASHES RECENTLY

TWO LOCAL AND TWO OUTSIDE DRIVERS INVOLVED.

Lower Church Street has recently been the scene of two automobile mishaps. On Tuesday afternoon an Essex Sedan driven by Mrs. Irving French and a Star touring car driven by True Eames, connected as Mr. Eames entered the street from between the Bames Restaurant and Crockett's Garage. The axle and fender of Mrs. French's car were bent and the radiator sustained most of the damage on the Bames car.

The Ford sedan of Emil Holtz of New York City was thrown onto the wall in front of the residence of Mrs. A. L. Brooks, on the corner of Church Street and the West Bethel road Wednesday morning when it ticked the rear of a Buick sedan crossing in front of it. The Buick, driven by Ward Kilgore of Auburn, was unharmed, but the Ford suffered a smashed wheel and fenders.

PROGRESS MADE IN TAX REDUCTIONS

Citing action already taken in Maine to reduce the burden of local, county, and state taxation, State Tax Assessor Frank H. Holley in a letter to the New England Council made public last week declares that "continuance of these policies" is necessary if "results of a satisfactory nature are to be obtained in the campaign for controlled public expenditures and reduced taxation."

Praising the "valuable assistance which the New England Council is giving in the problems with which all tax officials find themselves confronted," Mr. Holley indicates his continued cooperation with the campaign being conducted by the New England Council for the reduction of local public expenditures.

In making Mr. Holley's letter public, Executive Vice President Dudley Harmon of the New England Council declared that it "deserves the careful attention of every citizen and particularly of business men."

"The New England Council," he said, "will press forward its campaign to promote the reduction of public expenditures. Budget reductions totalling $14,000,000 have been made throughout New England, but much more must be done. As President Knight of the Council has said, we believe that tax reduction, like charity, should begin at home. We are making public Mr. Holley's letter at this time, because we consider it a most important and authoritative contribution to the current discussion of a very serious problem."

Assessor Holley's letter follows: "In October of last year a retrenchment alarm was sounded at the meeting of the local assessors of Maine, held in the State House. This being followed by the meeting of your organization in Boston in November, gave the retrenchment movement a splendid background. The fact that municipalities in Maine reduced tax rates, ranging from three to thirty per cent, at their annual meetings in March last, would seem to indicate a real desire to adopt smaller budgets. The free use of public speakers, the friendly attitude of the press, the well organized activities of business and professional men and women in the larger centers, the complete cooperation of the Grange and other groups in smaller centers, the formation of taxpayers' Leagues, and the general interest of all concerned, have been the contributing factors which have brought about a general reduction in tax assessments. A continuance of these policies would seem to insure future results of a satisfactory nature."

"The State Bureau of Taxation has set a good example in economy by making public the facts that during the first four months in 1932 the Gasoline Division collected 16% more tax with 27% less money than during the first four months of the previous year; and that the Property Division showed a saving of 44.2% in salaries and clerk hire, and a saving of 55.9% in general office expenses, during the same period."

"May I indicate to you my thorough appreciation of the valuable assistance which your organization is giving in the problems with which all tax officials find themselves confronted?"

The meeting and banquet of the Lions Club was held at Maple Inn Tuesday evening. Dr. Buhrmaster, house physician at Bethel Inn, was the speaker of the evening.

TWADDLE ACQUITTED OF RECKLESS DRIVING

CHARGE THE OUTCOME OF ACCIDENT IN BRUNSWICK JULY 23.

The man was taken by Twaddle to a physician and later to the Brunswick hospital where he remains. One leg was badly broken below the knee.

Twaddle, with Robert Littlehale, also of Bethel, was returning from Boothbay when, meeting the bright lights of another car, he was unable to see Stubbs until about four feet from him. He was traveling about thirty-five miles an hour.

BOYS ENGAGED IN CITIZEN'S CAMPAIGN FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS

Since last week's Citizen made its appearance, several boys have called at the editor and received receipts. That they have an unusual opportunity is very evident, for there are yet a few who are not regular readers of this paper. There are many visitors who are with us during the summer, many people spending a few days or weeks with home folks here, who have only to be shown what the Citizen now offers to become enthusiastic subscribers. There are subscribers who will renew and perhaps order a subscription for a friend instead of wrapping their Citizen and remailing it before all of their own family has read it.

If you want to ride your own bicycle there will not be a better chance to get one than in this way. The bicycle is a time machine in every way, continuing with United States Chain Tread, floor, Laidell rim, New Departure hubs. Read the advertisement on page seven. Call at the Citizen office and see the bicycle. And please remember every person earning less than $2000 a year before Sept. 2 will receive a cash commission according to Rate No. 6.

He feels that in setting forth the merits of this paper he is saving the people of this vicinity money by recommending to them this economical method of acquiring volumes of interesting fact, fiction, news and advertising at the price of one yearly subscription. We would like to have you read his letter. We know it will be of interest to you.

PRESIDENT OF N. E. POULTRY GROUP TO ADDRESS ASSEMBLY

F. R. Hazard, a poultryman of Sanderson, R. I., and president of the Northeastern Poultry Producers Council, will address the poultrymen assembled at the Second Annual Poultry School to be held at the College of Agriculture, Orono, August 15 and 16, the committee on arrangements announced today.

Mr. Hazard is scheduled to speak at 2 p. m. the first day on the subject, "Northeastern Poultry Producers Council and Its Program." He will also address the banquet to be held on Monday evening. This announcement was made today by the committee in charge of arrangements.

The Northeastern Poultry Producers Council consists of an affiliation of recognized poultry associations of the Northeastern states consisting of the New England states, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia. The committee has invited Mr. Hazard to participate in their Second Annual Poultry School believing that the program being sponsored by this Council is of vital interest to the poultry producers of Maine.

This event will be the second annual meeting of the poultrymen at Orono. Last year there were over two hundred poultrymen in attendance.

Detailed programs are now being mailed to those who request them from the College of Agriculture, Orono, Maine. Those planning to attend should make reservations for rooms, board and room at the dormitories may be obtained for $1.50 a day.

TIME BUDGET IN HOME GIVES MORE LEISURE

Omitting the daily dusting of the chairs or the top of the piano is no crime even though most people are sensitive to the beauties of order and cleanliness. The old-fashioned and hopeless proverb, "Man's work is from sun to sun, but woman's work is never done" can now be replaced by the twentieth century challenge, "Manage time or time will manage you," believes Edna M. Cobb, home management specialist, University of Maine, who suggests a time budget. She says:

"Scheduling and dispatching work are the twins used in getting the housework done so there is a little time left over for the enrichment of family life. Some housewives are good at making schedules, but can't seem to make them work; others are so busy dispatching work as the tasks come along one after another that the day is spent in confusion, and night brings only weariness and the promise of another day just like the one before."

"Before making out a time schedule, however, it is well to weigh values, consider what are the most important things to be done each day, if some of the non-essentials may be lessened or eliminated altogether."

"Then one must know how long it takes to do each task. The only way to find out is to keep a time record for a few days. If one did no more than that, it would be quite illuminating to know how many unnecessary minutes are sometimes spent on one task because of the wrong kind of arrangement of equipment, the wrong time of day or week when the task is customarily performed, the lack of delegating tasks that other members of the family can do as well or better than mother herself."

"Making the time schedule or the time budget consists of the following:

1. List the important things to be done, with the time each will take.
2. Arrange in order.
3. Allow time for interruptions, for some are sure to come and are unavoidable, others may be avoided by careful planning.
4. If there are no interruptions, time can be used for less important work.
5. Plan time for rest and play and use it as planned.
6. Make the program workable but flexible."

FARM BUREAU NEWS

"You can count me in on the new Dairy Record Club," says Chas. Hersey of North Waterford. Mr. Hersey has a herd of Jerseys together with milking Shorthorns. Another new recruit is C. F. Tripp, Canton, who is particularly anxious to get figures on a herd of good Jerseys he has been developing. Individual cow records on milk and butterfat production and feed records can be secured by any dairyman within or out of the county through this new dairy herd service. The records and tests are computed by Morton S. Curtis, Paris, who is employed to carry on this Extension project. Over 400 cows are now under test.

Maine's Second Annual Poultry School is being held at the University of Maine, Orono, August 15-16. According to H. L. Richardson, Poultry Specialist, who was in the county last week, nearly all of those who attended last year will be present again this year, together with many new folks.

Two hundred and twenty-five attended last year. Among the poultrymen in the county who plan now to attend are Carroll DeCoster, Norway; Merle Adams, Canton; and members of the DeCoster Farm, Buckfield. Programs can be obtained by writing to the Farm Bureau Office, South Paris.

Improved Potato Seed Plots have received their first inspection. Plots particularly free from disease this year include those of John Talbot, Andover; S. E. Abbott, L. C. Stevens, Ernest Luxton, Bethel; H. H. Buck, Buckfield; L. L. Holmes, Mexico; D. K. Elliot, Rumford Point; Henry Plummer and Guy Knightly, South Paris; and Edgar Barrett, Sumner.

A. K. Gardner, Extension Crops Specialist, was present at the Potato Disease meetings in Andover, Rumford, North Lovell and Waterford and discussed the various diseases and insect pests present in potato fields.

Keep Saturday, August 20, open on your calendar and attend the Farm Bureau and Pomona Field Day at Songo Pond, Bethel.

MONEY LOST ON MILK

More economical production of milk in the United States, with a lowering of costs to the consumer, is urged in a report just published by the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection. With milk selling at less than a dollar per 100 pounds in some parts of the country, it is not the fault of the farmer if consumers are paying more than they should for their milk. Even if the farmer should receive double the present price, he would be getting less than the cost of production.

4-H GIRLS AT STATE CAMP TO HAVE A QUOITS TOURNAMENT

A state wide quoits tournament, the first of the kind in Maine, is being planned for girls from each county who are delegates to the State 4-H Camp at Lewiston, September 4-7. Lester H. Shibles, state club leader, announced today.

This contest, Mr. Shibles explains, is a companion feature to the horse shoe tournament recently announced for the boy delegates.

A team of two girls will be selected from the four regular delegates from each county. A preliminary contest will be conducted on Tuesday, September 6, among the several teams representing each county in the state. On the following morning, the semifinals will be contested among the six highest teams. The afternoon finals will be between the two highest teams. All games will be played with regulation quoits and under rules adopted as standard by many municipal playgrounds. Each girl on the winning team will receive a five year subscription to the Country Home, a farm and home magazine of national circulation.

SMALL MAINE WOODLOTS OFFER PROFIT TO THEIR OWNERS

People like the "woods" but many are not physically able to reach the "big woods" in Maine. This leads Albert D. Nutting, extension forestry specialist at the University of Maine, to suggest that many farm woodlot owners could make their tracts a bit more accessible and with profit, too. He says:

"Roads used for hauling fire wood and logs make good trails for travel that are easily accessible to those who like the woods but who are not physically able to reach them. Many farmers could encourage interest in their woodlots by making these roads a little more conspicuous so that they can be easily found by the passer by. The woodlot that is made accessible to those who like the woods will become well advertised by those who visit it. The more people that are attracted to the woods for recreation, the greater will be the sale of camp sites and farm produce for the camper."

"The value of the woodlot for recreation is becoming more evident each year. Our record of tourists entering Maine and the great increase of people going to the Adirondacks in New York State are proofs of this. Our farmers in Maine with woodlot areas should consider this fact and develop their wood roads for trails as well as for hauling purposes. In other words, let us open the woodlot to the public who appreciate it."

IT'S ALL IN A FARMER'S LIFE

Monday, Aug. 1.—Who cannot help envying the happy farmer? Last night the gentle rain came and made everything glad, how fresh and green the fields and gardens looked. The welcome sunshine, not a cloud to be seen this morning. A breath of purest air. Never mind though his shirt is faded and his trousers in need of patches. His shoes may be run down at the heels. These things don't count. His appetite is good. He is physically fit for the tasks of the day, (and there is plenty of work on the farm), a place of content and enjoyment.

QUALITY IN HENS MAKES FOR PROFIT

Rigid Selection Matter of Much Moment

It is possible to select and breed Leghorns to increase body weight, weight of eggs, and number of eggs produced, without sacrificing any of these increases to bring about any of the others, says the Cornell university experiment station in a bulletin recently published.

While it is said to be a normal tendency for the weight of the egg and the weight of the hen to decrease with an increase in the number of eggs, rigid selection, the station says, will overcome this tendency. Not only that, but the tendency was also to lengthen the egg-laying period and to put off the time when egg-laying diminishes through the maturity of the birds.

The studies made a careful comparison between birds of high-laying capacity and those of low capacity. The high producers ate more than the low producers; but, nevertheless, it took about twice as much feed to get a dozen eggs from the low producers. When costs and incomes are balanced, the evidence is all in favor of the pullets from a long line of ancestors selected for egg production. "When the annual feed cost, which is about 50 per cent of the cost of producing eggs, is deducted from the gross income, there is still an advantage of $2.01 per pullet, annually, in favor of the high-line bird," the bulletin says.

Poultry House Windows in Summer and Winter

Advantages for the poultry house need not be placed in the same category as face curtains and a radio for the dairy stable, since many houses are confined to the house all summer, says Prof. F. L. Fairbanks of the New York State College of Agriculture. Windows in poultry houses are arranged to let in all the sunlight possible. The sunlight is an advantage in winter but in summer a large sunlight pattern on the floor tends to keep the house too hot.

For summer ventilation Professor Fairbanks advises having windows on two or more sides of the house. With the windows and ventilators open, the air movement does not keep the temperature of the house lower than out-of doors but do remove dust, odors, and moisture and makes the house seem cooler.

In hot, still, sultry weather an electric fan set four or five feet from the floor and faced to blow across the pen or along the wall, but not directly on the birds, gave some relief, he says.

Turkey Losses Checked

Experienced turkey breeders have found that strict sanitation, including clean ground, is essential as a means of controlling parasites and diseases in their flocks.

Trials conducted at the North Dakota Agricultural college show that 63 artificially-hatched poulters that were placed on clean ground sustained no losses from blackhead; while 45 turkey poulters hatched from the same hens as the other group and allowed to run with the mother hen on ground previously used by chickens sustained a loss of all but four with blackhead. Two of these four poulters at the time of marketing showed characteristic blackhead lesions when killed, leaving only two of the original 45 to go "scot-free" from disease or parasites.

The rotation of yards, preferably on alfalfa ranges, is the simplest method to follow out the sanitation program for turkeys.—Dakota Farmer.

Clean Shell Important

The clean shell of an egg indicates that it was produced under sanitary conditions. It costs no more to produce clean eggs after one is once prepared and becomes accustomed to the changed processes necessary. Many of these essentials are necessary for the general health and productivity of the flock. They include dry housing conditions, sanitary precautions, corrected nesting arrangements, and feeding practice.—Successful Farming.

Poultry Hints

Baby chicks double in size during the first two weeks of life.

The period of incubation for duck eggs is 28 days, except for the Muscovy, which is 33 to 35 days.

Crossbred broods or varieties of poultry is not recommended. The birds from the first cross may have the good qualities of both parents but further crossing will result in a degenerated mongrel flock.

Fully hatched poulters should have good width between the legs to allow the heart, lungs and egg organs to work satisfactorily. In fact, width of back and width between the legs are two essential points to be considered in a good layer.

LOVE OR A CAREER?

By FANNIE HURST

(By the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

VERYWHERE about her, ever since she could remember, she had heard the bright patter about economic independence of men.

was wonderful to belong so irre vably to a world of women which asserted its right to venture un fettered into certain fields of work activities hitherto reserved for exploits of men.

anyone had out and out asked her if she were a suffragette, her reply would have been evasive, non committal and unconsciously not quite true.

she did not have to be so stern and impractical an advocate as that; she did not intend to let herself be called "strong minded" about it. Those were the sort of women who defeated their own cause; antagonized the men and alienated the women.

Emmie was not particularly con cerned about the vote, even as a sym bol to this much heralded emancipa tion. Women's party membership much! All very well and good for those women who wanted to risk their names and their charm and their de bility, catching trains for Wash ington to get bills introduced and passed. Of course some one to do it and certain kinds of men were magnificent for the job.

economic independence to Emmie was just a pleasant isolated fact, a five dollars a week as confiden tial secretary to a life insurance com pany's vice president, who seldom came to his office more than three or four mornings a week, and who placed his confidence in his secretary's experience to copy with the honorary titles of his largely honorary position.

Emmie free to enjoy to their full the economic advantages of a good salary, an extraordinary amount of time and a pleasant apartment in which she had the time, taste and will to entertain with judgment and style.

It was not surprising that a young man in her position, good-looking, a brown, sleek-haired, slender and gentle sort of way, quite because she did not attempt to dress well, alert be cause she had leisure and money for books, books, books, and theaters, and think twice, any twice, before considered anything so drastic as marriage, even into conditions which would have materially, was some times at which to look askance. Her position was so right. So secure. So good. Even a marriage that bettered materially, was gravely liable to pit her.

But it so happened that the opportu nity of marriage which presented itself to Emmie was not one to better her position in the worldly sense of the word.

Thomas Maughan's earnings were not the same as Emmie's, and his life in a large Middle West city did have made it impossible for him to continue here in the East.
Thomas, in that curiously able way of his, was out-and-out and what he wanted where Emmie's duties were concerned.

All well and good for women to go into business and careers after marriage. Thomas was the last per son to have an attitude about it in general, but he wasn't going to make his bones about his attitude in par ticular. Let the future take care of it. But for the first year or two three, at least, Thomas wanted to make his home—after that, well, he would talk about it.

Neither was Thomas the one to ask about the fact of children. He knew them and he wanted them like he and Emmie were still young enough to enjoy youth with their off spring. All in all, it looked as if Emmie's idea about the future, which was apparently so willing to let the care of itself, was pretty well laid out.

Life in a Middle West city, as the life of a young salesman for an au tomobile firm, was not the glamor ous Emmie had dreamed for herself those occasions when she let her thought reach into the future beyond her present. And that salesman one who had certain reactionary views at were rather frightening.

In the abstract it could scarcely be said that the opportunity to marry Thomas Maughan was the very one that should have attracted her re sponse, except for one great factor.
Emmie was in love with Thomas.
He was the sort of man she could vis ualize with thrill, as the husband of the household, the father of her chil ren, the dear close confident of ev ery aspect of her life. He had qual ities that in a man were precious to Emmie: gentleness, intelligence, a charming laissez faire. This she told herself, his easy-going quality to let tomorrow take care of it, was what was going to stand his way of an ultimate big suc cess in life. But just the re, it kept him sweet and unchew ed gentle in the way that was so ap pealing to her.

For three months Emmie dabbled with the idea of marrying Thomas, in between the conflicting elements what was undoubtedly attraction; her actual knowledge of his shortcom ings; her dread of the monotony of a routine life would mean; and her hovering sense of the folly of throwing away her freedom and econ omic independence.

In the end her judgment, and what she called her common sense, and her distaste for the sordidness of the rou tine of comparative poverty, stacked up against what she called her school girl romanticism, and one morning, in the Middle West city, Thomas re ceived the letter which permanently severed their provisional engagement.

Afterward, as Emmie told herself, she realized to what extent she had hovered on the edge of folly. Once the letter had been written dismissing Thomas, it seemed to her that all her good judgment, released from bondage, came flowing to hedge her in further from the folly of what she had con templated. Once that letter was writ ten and mailed, it seemed incredible to Emmie that she had ever even hovered on the edge of indecision.

Three months later, her salary was increased thirty-three and one-third per cent, and at the end of two years her photograph had appeared in a pop ular magazine as one of the ten high est-salaried women in the country.

She has a three-story house now, on one of the smart "East side streets" of the city, which she shares with a wom an friend who is almost equally suc cessful in another field of endeavor.

Their joint Sunday evening at home are among the most popular in an ex clusive and sophisticated set of pro fessional and social men and women.
At forty, Emmie is chic, worldly wise, traveled, successful and filled with the divers interests of a demanding and complex business life; a busy social whirl, good clothes, good food, and even better business prospects.

She and her woman friend, however, plan to retire one of these days and take a hunting trip into East Africa that will consume several years.

Every so often, on one of her busi ness trips across country, Emmie has occasion to stop in Tom Maughan's city and she never fails to look him up. Thomas has married, is earning about sixty dollars a week, and with his wife and two children, occupies a bungalow in a row of similar ones, on a pretty suburban street.

Eileen Maughan is forty, a little fat, blond, and his two tall gangling sons, one in hers and one in Thomas' image. Their lives apparently are as routinized as the row of bungalows in which they live, except for the fact that Eileen does not see it that way, and Thomas does not, and the universe about the unit of four in that small house on the small street is busy and happy and crammed with the petty anxieties and joys of a humdrum ex istence.

There is no doubt, of course, that not for one instant would Emmie change places with Eileen.

On the other hand there is even less doubt that Eileen could contemplate anything so calamitous as having to change places with Emmie.

Writer Sees No "Punch"
in Rereading of Book

We see frequently the statement by some one that he has read a certain book, usually fiction, two or three times. It seems to us that anyone who can do that and find anything new must have been a negligent reader the first time. We don't care for the bony wreck of the turkey for days af ter Thanksgiving to be picked over in search of a few shreds we may have missed; and what we haven't missed in a story is like hearing an anecdote a second time. Where's the punch?

Music, our hearts may call for, over and over again, but literature doesn't seem to be that way, unless it is a gem of words coloring like Ruskin's or Carlyle's or Maeterlinck's, or a poem, which is another form of music—or ought to be if it is a good poem.

But why one should want to read
"David Copperfield" five, six, a dozen times is to us incomprehensible; or "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," or "Jane Eyre." We grasped their pictures, their emotion, their lessons the first time.

True, if, after many years, we have well-nigh forgotten a book, we may refresh our memory by a rereading, but while our memory would be refreshed, we fear we wouldn't be. "The mill will never grind with the water that is past,"—F. H. Collier, in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Gothic Influence Gothic architecture is based on the use of the pointed arch in place of the round arch and the use of but tresses to balance the tendency of a heavy vaulted roof to push the walls outwards. Thus buildings were made higher, with many vertical lines lead ing the eye upward. Between but tresses great windows were left in the walls, which came to be filled with magnificent stained glass. Decorative carving and statuary were lavishly used inside and out. Wherever these elements appear in a modern building it is safe to suspect that the architect has gone back to Gothic for inspira tion.

The Brown Creeper
The brown creeper is a methodical bird and when it covers the field of its endeavors with great detail. This bird, somewhat smaller than the House Sparrow, is brown and gray on the back and upper parts, making it largely camouflaged when working in a tree. It is an operative feeder upon larvae and usually starts at the base of a tree and spiraling around it, works its way up to the top, feeding upon all the larvae it can find en route.

Polo Old Pastime

Polo was known in Persia long before the Christian era. In fact there is a story to the effect that when Alexander the Great was still a young man the Shah of Persia sent him a ball and polo himself with nothing more serious than the game. Alexander replied that the polo ball, in his case, represented the

Whales Largest of Mammals

An 80-foot apalodocus would have 45 feet of tail, 20 of neck and only 12 of body length. These creatures were vegetarians, and with their relatively tiny heads—no bigger than horses' heads they must have had to eat continuously during all their waking hours to get enough food for their huge bodies.

Yet these ancient monsters were not the largest animals that ever lived. The largest animals are living today—the whales. Though not so long as some of the dinosaurs, they are more solidly built, and therefore considerably heavier than any din osaur probably ever was. And being warm-blooded, flesh-eating animals, they are without doubt more efficient animals than the great dinosaurs were.

Matter Among Indians

Boundary Hard to Define

The narrowest strip of land between Asia and Africa is the Suez isthmus through which the canal runs, and the natural geographic boundary between the two great land divisions is the great canal; but the question is somewhat complicated by the fact that the Sinai peninsula and the territory to the Mediterranean is politically a part of Egypt. Many map makers include the latter region in the map of Africa, making the eastern boundary of Egypt the dividing line between the two continents.

While she affiliated with the Universalist Church, she had much appreciation of the importance of religion as expressed by all Christian churches as a guide to right living and the fundamental basis of Christian civilization; and in conformity with her broad views of religion and freedom from bigotry, she had for many years, and especially during the year of her last illness, an abiding faith in the promises of the Bible as explicated and clarified by Mrs. Libby was a woman of high intelligence and of a refined and pure mind. She had a gentle, loving and happy disposition and was loved and respected by a host of warm personal friends who testified to their affection for her by a constant supply of beautiful flowers during her long and painful illness. She bore her sufferings with patience and heroic fortitude and, despite the pain she endured, always had a smile and cheerful word for her friends and neighbors who made daily calls to cheer and comfort her.

A Wonderful Formula Ends Aches and Pains Almost Like Magic.
Something Better and Safer!

Thousands of men and women are now stopping throbbing, sick, dizzy, splitting headaches, as well as the excruciating pains of rheumatism, neuritis, toothache, etc., with a marvelous new formula that is said to be far superior to anything heretofore used.

scribed by thousands of doctors, dentists and welfare nurses because of the quick, efficient way it relieves all types of pain and inflammation, relieving the heart, or causing any other harmful effects. A-VOL quickly stops the most severe pain, leaving the patient refreshed and feeling fine. Especially effective in women's period pains.

To quickly prove to yourself that this is truly the "miraculous formula" just stop into your nearest drug store and get a package of A-VOL for a few cents. Take a couple of tablets right there. If your pain is not gone in five minutes, the clerk will return your money.

CALIFORNIA MARRIAGE OF INTEREST HERE

DAUGHTER OF FORMER BETHUEL
RESIDENTS MARRIED JULY 23.

Announcements have been received here of the marriage of Miss Josephine Irene Springer to Amos Russell Nael, which occurred at Avalon, California, on Saturday July 23rd. Mrs. Nael is the daughter of the late Nelson R. Springer and Mrs. Hattie E. Springer, who went to California from Bethel several years ago.

The granges in Pennsylvania are taking an active interest in local school affairs, and are formulating a definite program to save their rural schools from the wave of consolidation sentiment which has been sweeping over the state. Pomona and subordinate Granges are vigorously discussing school topics and some stirring resolutions have already been adopted, expressing the feelings of the Grange parents and property owners.

The demand is made for less outside interference in local school affairs, leaving the length of terms and salaries of teachers to the discretion of the rural people, rather than following a fixed policy laid down by the state. Prominent school-authorities in the Keystone State are seeking laws to wholly eliminate the one-room schools and to put into effect a wide consolidation system. This the Grangers are strongly opposing and are finding hearty support from many tax-payers outside the organization.

Resolved, by the members of this Pomona, that we condemn such school legislation that does not meet with the approval of our rural people in this time of depression, as our overhead does not warrant such radical changes as are proposed by the state in school courses and management; and the consolidated school often takes too much time in drilling, parades and non-essentials, at the expense of fundamentals which enter into our daily life, and have proven to be of real value.

PORTO RICAN MISSIONARY SPENDING MONTH IN TOWN

The Rev. Joseph Haviland, a Porto Rican missionary from New York City, is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gillingham in West Bethel. Mr. Haviland is a graduate of Bates College and for the last three years has attended theological institutions in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia.

In expressing his views in respect to the United Movement, whose cause he is fostering in this state, Mr. Haviland says that a first hand experience of Jesus Christ is the one thing needed to bring Christians back to a vital and fruitful faith. Most of us Christians have been living on the religious experience of our grandmothers, and our Christianity becomes a mere formalism. Our experience of Christ is the most precious and eventful thing in our lives, and should be the greatest news we could communicate for it is good news.

Mr. Haviland is staying here until September and is available for groups in homes anywhere in the state.

CHURCH ACTIVITIES

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
L. A. Edwards, Pastor
10:45 Morning Worship, with sermon by the pastor. His subject will be "The Attractive Christ."

There are qualities in certain individuals that draw men to them; while other people have qualities that repel. Two thousand years ago a man lived on earth who so impressed Himself upon His day and age, that even His enemies said "Behold the world has gone after Him."

After the lapse of twenty centuries the influence of this man is stronger than that of any other man who ever lived.

We shall consider some of these qualities that have made this life endure.

WHY BOYS NEED SCOUTING

8. Purposefully filled leisure which will grip the boy's interest.

One of the most pitiful happenings in family life today is the breaking up of the group spirit which formerly was so prevalent. With this breaking-up comes a new phase of family life where children are urged to play with other children their own age and an ever increasing demand on part of parents that they be relieved of the constant care of the adolescent child. So there comes into the life of every boy a large amount of leisure time which he has liberty to use as he wants to. Now a lot depends of how he uses this spare time. If it is filled with activity which not only grips his interest but is also constructive, he is developing with purposeful ideal. But if his spare time is filled with a hit-or-miss activity his development does not run along guidance lines and wrong ideals may develop.

Obituary

MAUD ABBIE BECKLER

The many friends of Maud Abbie Beckler were shocked and saddened to hear she had gone on that last long journey from which there is no returning. She passed peacefully away at the home of Mrs. Mabel Beckler, where she had been cared for since being brought there ill the 6th of July. The end came peacefully late Saturday night, July 20th.

She was born in Albany, Nov. 30th, 1874, the daughter of George and Julia Palmer Beckler. She received her education in the town schools, and at the age of sixteen began working as a waitress, which profession she followed the rest of her life. She had employment in Conway, N. H., and for many years was at Kineo each season. Nine years ago she came to Bethel Inn where she has been a most efficient and faithful headwaitress the year round, except for short vacations.

Loved and respected by all who knew her, her cheery words and happy smile will be missed for many a day. A loving, loyal, and noble soul, has the reward of life everlasting, where there is no parting, sorrow, or pain, but only joy and laughter.

A brother, W. I. Beckler of Albany, is the only survivor of a family of two girls and three boys. One nephew, Philip Beckler of Carmel, N. Y., three nieces, Mrs. Gertrude Beckler Mattoon of Littleton, N. H., Mrs. Myrtle Beckler Gullow of Boston, and Helen Beckler of Bethel, also three grandnieces and many other relatives and hosts of friends mourn her passing.

A profusion of beautiful flowers, spoke silently of the love and esteem felt for her by all. Services were held at the church at Hunt's Corner Monday afternoon. Rev. Mr. Bull spoke comforting words to the grieving friends and relatives who filled the church. She had been a member of Round Mountain Grange for years. Interment was in the family lot in the cemetery beyond Hunt's Corner. The bearers were Ralph Moore, Patrick O'Brien, Arthur Morgan and Merton Conner, all employed at Bethel Inn.

Oh! time thou art fleeting,
And soon comes the meeting
Of those gone before
To that bright golden shore,
And all pain and sorrow
Will be gone with the morrow.
And in that bright "Hereafter"
All will be joy and laughter.

MRS. MARIA KIMBALL

Mrs. Maria, widow of Bryce Kimball, passed away at their old home near the foot of Songo Pond in Albany, July 30th. She was born March 24th, 1848 in Greenocks, N. S., the daughter of Matthew and Susan Good. When a girl she came to Albany to be with a sister who later passed away leaving an infant daughter to whom she gave a mother's care for years.

She married Bryce Kimball, who passed away in 1915. Five children were born to them; Maggie, who died at the age of sixteen; John, who lives at Locke Mills; Rob, who lives in Norway; Gust, wife of Ben Inman, who has always lived at home; and Charles, of North Waterford. There are two grandsons and five granddaughters and numerous nephews and nieces who will miss her.

"Aunt Maria" and "Uncle Bryce" were always ready to lend a helping hand in sickness and sorrow. Although nearly blind the declining years of her life, she bravely "carried on" and is now in

That fair land of forever,
Where there is no parting never,
And all the pains and sorrows Vanish in those glad tomorrows.
Happy voices ring in greeting,
Loved ones join in the meeting
And the Master calls "Come home"
From the glorious bright Throne.

Services were held at the School house Tuesday afternoon conducted by S. S. Greanleaf. Rob spoke words of comfort to the grieving relatives and friends. Beautiful flowers cover her lying place in the cemetery in the home where she spent so many years.

The bearers were the sons, Rob, Charles and the son-in-law, Inman.

MRS. M. ANNIE WILLIS

After an illness of several weeks, Mrs. M. Annie Willis, widow of Ham F. Willis, died Tuesday at her home at West Paris, Me. She was the daughter of George and Submit (Shurtliff) Stevens.

She was united more than 50 years ago with Mr. Willis, and they the house where they resided. Mrs. Willis had two children, W. W., who died in young manhood, and Mrs. Laura A. McKee, who was married to Mr. Willis passed away many years ago. Mrs. Willis is also survived by a granddaughter, Ruth McKee, her sister, George Frederick, who resided in the West, a twin brother, and nephews.

She was a member of the church at North Paris, but always attended all services of the United Methodist church as long as health permitted.

Mrs. Willis' life has been lived with kindness. From almost household the flowers and the memories brought by her in of illness or trouble, or to the of shut-ins are spoken of with appreciation, and she always every opportunity for service gladness and pleasure. A great of flowers, it seemed most fitting at the funeral service such a of beautiful flowers expressed deep appreciation of her many friends.
